You have received a vaccine

The fundraising radio advertisement attracts immediate attention "You have received a vaccine; give a vaccine." We can be understandably anxious about the supply of vaccines especially for second doses but the ad reminds us that there are billions of people throughout the world who will not be vaccinated for months, if ever and may be without health service of any significant sort all their lives. We have freely received the gift of life and vaccines are being currently rolled out. Let us be thankful every day, especially today.

In today's Gospel, we find Jesus restoring life to the daughter of Jairus and being seen as a miracle worker. Each of us can be a co-worker in miracles when we reawaken hope in a despairing heart. We do it each time we shelter the homeless, feed and clothe the poor, care for the sick, journey respectfully with each other, especially the down trodden. Each of our miracle kindnesses can inspire gentleness in our own hearts and in those around us.

This is the week to be a miracle worker.

Which one will each of us focus on individually or together?

Which one will enrich my own heart and bring me closer to the miracle worker from Nazareth?

He will be a co-worker in our miracles.

Fr. Tom Clancy.
