"A DYING PLEA"

From Beara to the Glens of Antrim and in many other places throughout the country, young people and many others take pride in sporting the colours of their local club or county, either on or off the field of play. They wish to show their identity, to show where they are from and whom they idolise, support and imitate. In fact, to actually support their local community is a badge of honour by which they wish to be recognised. Jesus was very clear about how his followers were to be recognised. "By this love you have for one another, everyone will know that you are my disciples".

The required love is an enormous challenge. It is to love as Jesus loves us. His love knew no bounds and He loved to the last drop of His blood. He asks us to imitate Him.

Could He be serious? It must be an ideal that no ordinary person could live up to. How could anyone love as Jesus loved? Such love would change the world. It would bring about the new heaven and the new earth that John foresaw in the Second Reading, where God lives among men wiping away all tears and sadness.

Only Jesus can inspire us to shake off our fear, to risk loving as He loves, to make a start at home and in the neighbourhood to build a new world. At death's door, it was His dying plea. He must enable us to imitate Him if we allow Him.

Fr. Tom Clancy.
